Proposed Sitting/Sleeping Ordinance Stirs Public Reaction

"This says it all," said area resident Jan Lightfoot of the sign she brought to the recent meeting about an ordinance being considered to prohibit sitting or sleeping in two public areas in Colorado Springs. Another meeting about the legislation is set for 6 - 8 p.m., Thursday, Sept. 17 at the Westside Community Center, 1628 West Bijou Street.

By WILLIAM J. DAGENDESH

"It's a Band-Aid to be put on more problems than what the city can address. It's business owners versus people who walk these areas," said area resident Keesha Jackson about the ordinance being considered to prohibit sitting or sleeping in two areas of Colorado Springs.

"This issue has stirred up a hornet's nest because people are uncomfortable when visiting these places," said City Councilman Tom Strand during a public meeting of about 200 people at City Auditorium downtown on Thursday, Sept. 3.

Strand and Councilman Keith King are sponsoring the proposed ordinance that would prohibit lying, sitting, reclining or kneeling on streets, sidewalks, trails and objects in the right-of-way not intended for sitting in two specific areas from 7 a.m. - 10 p.m., Monday through Friday, and from 10 p.m. - 3 a.m. on Fridays and Saturdays.

One of the selected areas is in downtown Colorado Springs from St. Vrain to Cimarron streets bordered by I-25 on the west and Wahsatch Avenue on the east. The other area is in Old Colorado City from Pikes Peak Avenue to Cucharas Street between 23rd and 28th streets, also extending along Colorado Avenue from 21st to 31st streets.

Supporters said the ordinance focuses on these locations because their civic, commercial, historic, recreational and residential facilities are viewed as important for tourism.

Citizens would be required to sit on benches, chairs, vent vaults with concrete tops and other permanent structures designed for sitting. They also could sit, lie, kneel and recline in grassy areas of parks. Sitting, lying, kneeling in/on reclining curbs, planters, retention walls, sidewalks and trails would be prohibited.

Some citizens at the meeting said they believe the ordinance violates their rights and that it will be used to oust homeless citizens from the community. However others said the ordinance would combat harassment, loitering and vandalism. Organizers said Denver and Aurora, Colo., have implemented similar ordinances.

"A common problem many cities face is maintaining safe and vibrant commercial districts," Strand said.

"You don't see this kind of thing in Kansas City and we certainly don't need it here," said Charles Orthwein about the loitering problem. He supports the ordinance.

Cecilia Greenhalgh is also in favor of the legislation. "We need a vagrancy law, and the homeless need to get a J-O-B," she said.

However, James May who is homeless disagreed. "I get nowhere when looking for a job. And, I panhandle on the sidewalk where it is legal," said May.

In a statement, American Civil Liberties Union of Colorado Executive Director Nathan Woodliff-Stanley said his organization strongly opposes the proposed ordinance because it violates people's rights.

"Rather than spending taxpayer dollars to criminalize peaceful conduct, Mayor Suthers and the Colorado Springs City Council should focus their attention on addressing the root causes of poverty and homelessness," Woodliff-Stanley said.

King said the ordinance doesn't target the homeless, and that the city and shelter providers are working to increase the number of beds for its homeless residents. "We, as a city, must ensure Colorado Springs is a welcoming city for those with and without a home," he said.

If approved, the ordinance would go into effect this November, Strand said. Violators would receive a written warning for their first violation, a citation for their second, and could pay up to $2,500 in fines and/or spend six months in jail.

New Facility Being Remodeled Near Norris Penrose Event Center

By MELISSA ROLLI

This week the Mt. Carmel Center of Excellence opened its doors to help veterans and their families.

The center off of West Moreno Avenue just west of South Eighth Street is the second Mt. Carmel organization founded by local car dealership leader Jay Cimino. The first, the Mount Carmel Wellness Center in Trinidad, Colo., provides health and wellness to the needy in Las Animas County. The Colorado Springs facility is designed to be a one-stop center connecting veterans and their families to services and support such as housing assistance, educational and financial counseling, career development and behavioral health.

The center is located at 530 Communication Circle and is being remodeled with an expected completion of sometime next spring.

Retired U.S. Army Col. Bob

This rendering shows what the Mt. Carmel Center of Excellence is planned to look like once remodeling is complete at 530 Communication Circle off of West Moreno Avenue not far from the Norris Penrose Events Center. While still under renovation, the Mt. Carmel Center opened this week, beginning its work to be a one-stop center for support services for veterans and their family members.

McLaughlin, former garrison commander at Fort Carson, has been tasked with setting-up the center and is passionate about doing so. During a tour of the facility under construction two weeks ago, McLaughlin said the goal of the center isn't to duplicate services now available in the region but to augment what exists and, in some cases, provide a brick-and-mortar home to services.

McLaughlin said, for example, he met with the nonprofit United Service Organizations (USO) which offers programs for U.S. troops, and expects the USO may set up within the new Mt. Carmel Center.

The first functional pillar that is available there is the veteran career and employment program. The Peer Navigator Program, previously operated by AspenPointe, will be moving into the center this fall. Peer Navigators assist veterans transitioning out of the military to receive training, education and job-placement assistance.

Community support for the new center was on display with an event at the Country Club of Colorado off of Broadmoor Valley Road on Friday, Sept. 4. WWII aircraft pilots demonstrated formation flying in the morning. Golf took place in the afternoon, followed by a cook-out dinner and the "Light the Night" air show that evening.

A City With Great Potential

Mayor John Suthers Says Colorado Springs Has What It Needs to Grow and Prosper

By PATTYE VOLZ

Calling Colorado Springs “truly vibrant, rugged and exceptional,” Mayor John Suthers urged residents to join in efforts to make the city even better during his State of the City address at a luncheon of 740 people at the Broadmoor on Wednesday, Sept. 9.

The new mayor marked his 100th day in office by reviewing the three top priorities he articulated during his campaign (political environment, public infrastructure, job creation), outlining progress made so far and pushing the sales tax increase up for a vote on November 3.

“I am very pleased to report that the relationship between the Mayor’s Office and the City Council has improved dramatically and that we are communicating well and working collaboratively,” said Suthers about the status of his promise to improve the city’s political climate. He named and thanked the council members.

Suthers said the city’s economy has not kept up with its population growth, resulting in less money per capita for public spending which has caused “the state of our roads” to become “poor.” He said voters will have the opportunity to fix that by voting this fall on a .62 percent, five-year sales tax increase that would be used only for road maintenance and repair.

As far as progress on the

On his 100th day as Colorado Springs mayor, John Suthers said the “state of our city is good and the potential for our city is great” during his State of the City speech at Broadmoor Hall off of Lake Circle on Wednesday, Sept. 9.

city’s stormwater management problems, Suthers said he and the council have come up with a plan to reconstruct the stormwater fund from existing sources and a freeze on city wage increases.

He also voiced optimism about his vow to promote job creation, citing an uptick in various economic indicators, discussions with national companies about expansion, recent growth of the University of Colorado at Colorado Springs and his faith that the city can become the “cyber security capital of the world.”

Suthers then renewed his swearing-in-day call for area residents to participate in the city’s rejuvenation. “Perhaps you can volunteer to help beautify our city, to improve our trail system, to pick up trash or cut weeds, to mentor our youth, to assist our sick or elderly or to support the arts. There are unlimited opportunities to become involved in making Colorado Springs an even better place to live, work and play.”

OBSERVATIONS

BY HENRY WALTER

An Endorsement of Facing the Future

There seem to be two kinds of elections for leadership around the world: either you vote for the candidate who promises to not kill you immediately or one who can hold a Howdy Doody owdy DoodyHi smile the longest. (For those who don't remember the cartoon character of the past, he had a grin that Darth Vader would die for.)

It would seem the most valuable vote should be cast for the candidate who possesses the greatest ability to rule with a strong sense of moral rectitude, a grasp of reality and the ego of Mother Teresa. But that will never happen in the world we know. We are too preoccupied with our sense of self, the presumption that our way is always better. We have flush toilets.

What happens is that we pledge our provisional allegiance to the one who promises to keep feeding our gratifications, regardless of the reeking conditions it may create downstream for our progeny. We want the immediacy of quick and/or political solutions that take precedence over undesired consequences such as dependence upon our keepers for survival of our species, our very way of life.

We've tried a vast assortment of politicians who promote the same old ways—spend more money and fabricate false contentment. Keep on truckin' until we run out of gas. We can cry tomorrow.

Maybe it's time we look a bit more intensely at the corral of candidates who will play to our tune of picnicking in the sunshine while ignoring the building black clouds. What if we faced the future with realism that all ain't going to stay the same?

I may be accused of heresy by comparing the image of Ben Carson's abilities to the myriad talents of the roaring herd, the et alii. But here goes anyway.

Carson – thinker Et al – political expedience

Carson – running for leadership Et al – running for president

Carson – educational excellence Et al – social science, party platform, to get along, go along

Carson – street smarts earned in tough environment Et al – winning smiles, using wiles

Carson – decision maker Et al – diplomacy du jour and practice of stall

Carson – healer Et al – party line even if it hurts

Carson – do no harm Et al – get reelected, read "How to win friends and influence people"

Carson – pass the credit on if sensible Et al – claim another's victories

Carson – doesn't fear religion Et al – considers religion a competitor

Many will consider this an endorsement, but consider this: if the yearning for rational thinking as opposed to trying to please everyone at the expense of many, so be it. We have lived with a descending commitment to the greater good of our country for several generations. Is it any wonder we have lost our world leadership aptitude, our courage to uphold fairness, our inability to adapt to hardship in any form, of looking further than a handout...?

Of course there is need of diplomacy, political negotiation and compromise. Too often, though, the deliberations are a matter of who will pay the most for a particular decision. We someday will have to face the reality that politics is a gold mine, a vocation from which you can become very

The school year is off to a great start

BY DR. MARK HATCHELL

On August 27, I visited all 35 schools in our district during one long day. I always enjoy seeing our staff members welcoming new families and greeting our returning students.

During our six orientation sessions for new parents, board of education members and I greeted new families from within Colorado and from as far away as Angola and Siberia.

Thank you to our parents and staff members who have contributed to a successful start to the school year.

Energy efficiency

We now have two years of data available to help us measure our energy conservation efforts. Since the implementation of our Energy Management Program in September 2013, the district has avoided more than $1.2 million in utility costs. These successes are the result of individual and districtwide efforts by our staff members. Just this summer, we had an excellent response to our requests to staff members to shut down classrooms and work spaces for the summer. These measures included unplugging computers and appliances, turning off air conditioning in unoccupied spaces, and turning off lights. These efforts resulted in a 37 percent reduction in utility costs for June and July 2015, when compared to the same months in 2013 – a cost avoidance of nearly $300,000.

While we are pleased with these early results, our goal is a 20 percent reduction in utility costs by 2023. Our District Energy Specialist Michael Redmond continues to remind staff members to implement energy-saving practices each day, each weekend, and during any school breaks. We know that each dollar saved on utility costs is a dollar that can be used for educational programs that benefit students.

Summer School by the numbers

Our Summer School program continues to increase in popularity as many families look for enrichment activities for their students throughout the summer months. During our most recent two summer school sessions, we offered more than 100 sections of 60 unique courses. Nearly 300 more students participated in the 2015 program than attended courses in 2014. The number of elementary students enrolled in the summer reading skills program increased by 92 percent. Twenty-five middle school students participated in an outdoor education program held at the Teton Science School in Wyoming. Capacity crowds attended the summer band concerts held at Timberview Middle School in June and Mountain Ridge Middle School in July. Information about summer school starts going home to students and parents each spring. Watch for class offerings and registration information.

Parents invited to suicide prevention discussion Many of our school counselors and local experts who make it their mission to alert our community about suicide prevention are offering a presentation on Sept. 22 at 6:30 p.m., at our Education and Administration Center. You can register for this Parent Academy event by going to www.asd20.org/newsroom/parentacademy. The organizers ask that only adults attend. The speakers will focus on educating parents about the risk factors for suicide. They will also talk to parents about current programs and support activities in schools and in the community. Counselors will offer tips on how to talk to children if they or their friends are contemplating suicide. Information from local agencies such as Cedar Springs Hospital and Peak View Behavioral Health will also be available.

New Balloon Event Lifts Off

Enthusiasts Are Eager to Share Their High-Flying Pursuit

By PATTYE VOLZ

“Above is eternity, below is reality, and in between is peace,” said Mark Stepnowsky while helping put up a hot air balloon during last weekend’s Colorado Springs Labor Day Lift Off at Memorial Park.

“It’s like riding a magic carpet,” said Patsy Buchwald about floating through the air hundreds of feet above the ground in a balloon filled with 77,000 cubic feet of air - the capacity of the relatively small RE/MAX balloon Buchwald is crew chief for. Except for the sound of the propane burner which pilot Ken Tadolini turned on whenever he needed to heat the air so the balloon would rise, the flight as part of a media event on Friday, Sept. 4 was just as the others described - very peaceful.

“It takes six to eight tons of hot air to get it off the ground and it can carry 600 to 700 pounds,” said Stepnowsky, who admitted he is “addicted” to the hobby of hot air ballooning.

Echoing that sentiment, Buchwald said she took her first flight in 1979 and has been involved with ballooning ever since. She was president and CEO of the Colorado Balloon Classic which held its last Labor Day event in Colorado Springs in 2014.

“I’m very excited to see it continuing. I’m very proud of the new team,” said Buchwald about this year’s new event put on by Scott Appleman’s Hot Apple Productions with help

About 65 balloons and more than 140,000 spectators took part in the first-ever Labor Day Lift Off in Memorial Park last weekend. The event was a replacement of the Balloon Classic which ended with its 38th year in 2014.

from the Colorado Springs Sports Corporation and $90,000 worth of city support through the Lodgers and Automobile Rental Tax.

Buchwald said she was enjoying getting to participate in the event rather than running it as she did for 19 years. The 2015 Lift Off enabled the hot air balloon tradition to continue in Colorado Springs for its 39th year. This year’s event included a variety of entertainment and activities from Saturday, Sept. 5 through the morning of Monday, Sept. 7.

For Buchwald, Tadolini, Stepnowsky and their other crew-member, Dallas Lasley, it was clearly about enjoying the balloons, the flying and the camaraderie of the other balloonists.

Tadolini said he and Buchwald have flown all around the world, including such places as China, France, Mexico, New Zealand, the Philippines, Sicily and Switzerland. A balloon pilot for 27 years, Tadolini was once part of a Guinness World Records event flying to an elevation of 16,000 feet out of Breckenridge. A typical flight goes up to about 1800 feet and he took the RE/MAX balloon up to 2500 feet on Sept. 4.

“I like to see the excitement of other people,” said Tadolini in describing one of the reasons he enjoys being a balloon pilot. Recently, he took a group of senior citizens up for a ride with one 100-year-old woman requesting, “Go higher!”

Some of the tricks of this flying include always being aware of the wind currents and how much fuel is left, plus watching out for obstacles and good places to land, preferably in a public space. The chase crew heads off to meet the balloon as it starts to land and may have to seek permission if the balloon is heading to private property. Tadolini said they can get it all wrapped up and packed out in 20 to 30 minutes.

Ordinance

The fine is the maximum that can be imposed by a municipal court judge.

"It is an absurd government overreach to make it a crime worthy of a $2,500 fine and six months in jail to sit, kneel, or lie down in a public place," said Woodliff-Stanley.

A second meeting to discuss the ordinance is scheduled for 6 - 8 p.m., Thursday, Sept. 17 at the Westside Community Center, 1628 West Bijou Street. The council plans to vote on the proposed ordinance on Tuesday, Sept. 22. Email comments to City Council at allcouncil@springs.gov.

Executive Park Eye Care

The Best Quality Vision and Eye Care

FROM EXECUTIVE PARK EYE CARE

At Executive Park Eye Care, "Inspired by eyes, focused on you" isn't just a slogan - it's our commitment to provide you with the best quality vision and eye care. For most of us, our eyes are our most important sensory organ. Good vision allows us to enjoy the beauty of the world, to be independent and to enjoy a high quality of life. And your eyes are also a window to your overall health.

Just as phones have evolved over the last 20 years, so has eye care. We use the latest, state-of-the-art instruments and lenses. Our optometrists take the time to explain the results of your eye exam, describe your options, and listen to your eye care needs. Because maintaining eye health is an ongoing partnership, we encourage you to ask questions and share your health information, which could be vital to monitoring, diagnosing and treating potential vision problems.

Executive Park Eye Care is proud to be a vision consultant for the Colorado College Athletic Department and US Association of Blind Athletes.

Executive Park Eye Care first opened its doors in 1965. Now, Drs. Derber and Gales are greeting patients at 9240 Explorer Drive, Suite 100. We look forward to serving the Front Range community for another 50 years.

To schedule your appointment or learn more about Executive Park Eye Care, visit us online at executiveeyes.com, or call 719-574-7000.
